Cochran Bound Over: Bond Fixed at $300; Self Defense Claimed

Preliminary Hearing Before Mayor Cassingham Friday and Five Witnesses Examined—Poole Able to be Out—Big Crowd Present.

David Cochran was bound over to the grand jury by Mayor Cassingham Friday at 11:45 o'clock, following the preliminary hearing, and the bond was fixed at $300. Cochran was taken back to the city prison until it can be found out whether he will be able to furnish bond. In case he cannot he will be taken to the county jail to wait until the grand jury meets September 19.

Self-defense was the basis of the argument of Cochran's attorney, Levi Williams, at the close of the preliminary testimony offered by the state. Mr. Williams argued that Poole was a trespasser when he went to the house where Cochran boarded with his divorced wife. He argued that Cochran had a right a few minutes later to go out and ask Poole "What's the matter with you?" He argued that Poole's own testimony showed Cochran was attacked and knocked down by Charles Smith and was also attacked by Poole before Poole was stabbed.

Attorney Williams asked the court to make the bond very low as he was not sure that Cochran could furnish bond at all. He explained that when Cochran's wife got a divorce the court odered Cochran to pay her $10 per month and he has been doing this in addition to paying $5 a week board. Mr. Williams argued that it would be better for the public to have Cochran at work supporting his family than to have him in jail. Prosecutor McDowell insisted that the purpose of the bond is to guarantee Cochran's appearance in court and he asked that it be high enough to pay the expense of bringing Cochran back in case he should run away.

Five witnesses for the state were examined at the preliminary hearing: Charles Poole, Dr Marshall, George Washington, Little Louise Washington and Mrs. Cochran.

The knife with which Cochran is alleged to have stabbed Poole, the whetstone on which he is alleged to have sharpened it and the piece of a dress on which the blade was wiped off after the cutting were all introduced into evidence after an argument as to the admissibility of the knife.

Mrs. Cochran testified that Cochran had sharpened the knife to fix some fishing tackle over a week ago and she did not see it again until she saw it on the sofa Saturday night before the cutting. She said that the knife was found again three days after the cutting, by her little girl. It was in the cupboard, as stated in The Age Wednesday.

The preliminary hearing before Mayor Cassingham was started Friday morning at 9:30. Dr. Marshall, after visiting the prosecuting witness at the Farmers' hotel with Lieut. Hankins, reported that Poole was able to attend the hearing Poole walked to the city hall and seems to have almost recovered from the slash across his breast.

Cochran was brought out from the city prisonand took a seat near his attorney, Levi Williams. Prosecutor McDowell conducted the prosecution. Miss Margaret Nelson acted as court stenographer. Cochran waived the reading of the affidavit and entered a plea of not guilty. A half dozen witnesses were sworn by the mayor, including Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Washington and daughter, colored, Jim Beach and Mrs. Cochran. About forty spectators were present.

Charles Poole was questioned first by Prosecutor McDowell. Poole said he sat in front of the Farmers' hotel for about an hour and a half Saturday night and then walked over to John Tatten's soft drink parlor for awhile. From there went to George Washington's house about four doors from Tatten's and sat out in front Mrs. Cochran and her little girls came along and said they were afraid to go in their home. Poole offered to open the door for them. He went with the little girl who had the key and the key was placed in the door. A dog barked inside and Cochran said "What do you want, Charley?" Poole replied that Mrs Cochran and the children wanted in. "Tell them to come on in" said Cochran. A little later, Poole testified, Cochran came out in front and walked over to where Poole was sitting and asked Poole what was the matter with him.

Poole testified that Charley Smith jumped down from where he was sitting and hit Cochran and knocked him down. Smith went home and Cochran got up, starting toward Poole "I stepped up to hit Cochran" said Poole in responce to Prosecutor McDowell's questions "and just then I felt the sting of the knife. Cochran went back into the house. I went into George Washington's to telephone but they had no phone and I started for the Farmers' hotel but when I got out into the street I fell and that's the last I remember."

Atorney Williams asked Poole what he was doing earlier in the evening and the witness replied that he had been looking for a little beer. He said he had three or four pint bottles of beer and two drinks of whiskey. He said that it makes a fellow feel good and sociable. He said he got a bottle of pop in John Tatten's place.

The baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Ramsour of West Lafayette is critically ill suffering from a complication of diseases. The baby has been ill for the past week and has been growing weaker in the past few days. The parents are very much alarmed over the child's condition.

There is a dispute as to responsibility for the wreck, and Superintendent Skinner of the company refused to place it. The freight car, when it left Canal Winchester, had five minutes in which to make a switch, and this it was unable to do.

The collision occurred on a straight stretch of track. The motorman of the passenger car had brought his car almost to a standstill when it was struck. He jumped, as did both members of the crew of the freight car. Both cars were badly damaged. The interior of the passenger car was an almost complete wreck.

ILLINOIS MINERS VOTE TO HOLD OUT

[Associated Dailies Telegram]

Indianapolis, Aug. 12.—The special national convention of the United Mine Workers of America is in session here, with many offerings of peace by the delegates but with apparent determination of the factions following John Walker of Illinois and those following President Lewis to fight out their differences at any cost. About 1,100 delegates are present.

At a meeting of the Illinois delegates a resolution was adopted which bound the delegates to stand by the demands made at the Peoria convention "first, last and all the time"

Walker denounced the compromise proposition which was submitted to the Illinois miners by the international executive board and President Lewis. He said the Illinois miners knew their position was right and that they proposed to maintain it. He said he did not fear a fight on the floor of the convention.

Ben R. Vardaman Writes About How to Make Retail Store Successful

Says Sale Is a Mental Action and is Always Made in the Head of the Customer — Says Tricks Indicate Cowardice.

The following article on "The Art of Making Retail Stores" by Ben R. Vardaman, associate editor of the Merchants' Trade Journal, of Des Moines, Iowa, who delivered an address in Coshocton last winter under the tuspices of the Coshocton Business Men's association, appeared in this month's issue of "Judicious Advertising":

"You as a merchant are in business for the purpose of making sales. Your success in business depends upon your ability in selling the things you have for sale.

Any man with the money can buy goods. It requires knowledge of the art to successfully sell.

The average merchant spends more effort in trying to solve his problems through learning to buy than in trying to learn how to sell.

There is an art and a science in making a sale. It is just as thorough, just as complete as the science in chemistry, but we have not taken the time to delve to the bottom of it.

There are three prime elements entering into every sale. The salesman, the customer and the goods.

Sale is a mental action. The sale is always made in your customer's head—not in the cash drawer or the order book.

When a salesman fails to make a sale he should know exactly why he failed—there is a reason. He should not guess at the reason—he should know.

We sometimes think of the salesman as a trickster.

The merchant or the salesman who resorts to the little tricks of the trade to get business is a coward. He is afraid to approach people on an equal footing, because he knows he does not understand the great art and science of making a sale.

In taking up this subject I well realize that I am touching a tender spot in the business of every merchant I know that there is not a merchant but who wants to learn to do more business, to make more sales He may think and talk much about buying, about express and freight rates, about many other phases of his business, but after all it is with the thought of increasing his business and your business is selling goods.

Not only is this subject of mighty importance to any particular business, but it is a tremendous force in our present life.

Our whole commercial structure is founded upon the one primary principle of human activity—which is the strife of sustenance, food, clothing and shelter. Out of this one thing is developed all our present commerce, and of first importance in this development is the "sale."

I would have you forget for the time that you are engaged in any particular line of business. I would have you think only of the great principles involved in this subject—you have enough to do with the petty problems of your business every day, so I want you to forget what you are and consider only the great problem of leading people—for, after all, the art of making a sale is but another way of saying "The Art of Leading People.'"

If we had time to thoroughly analyze this subject we would discover that our commerce is the real power behind the "throne," the law-making bodies of the nations meet and spend long months in making laws—not primarily for the moral uplift—but to better the relations between men as they exist in the field of trade—in commerce, and if we go behind the scenes we will discover that all back along the way great battles, sieges and conquests have been brought to pass largely through the commercial conditions.

I will go a step farther and say that the world's commerce is and has been one of the chief factors in our civilization. I know that we are grasping the great science of leading and persuading people.

LOOS GAL

The thing we call "sale" is a mental action I ask the merchant how many sales he has made today and he goes to the cash drawer and counts the money, or he turns to the sales book and counts the list, and then tells me the number he says, here are my sales But he is mistaken These tickets in the cash register drawer are only evidence of sales having been made—they are not the sale The money is only evidence that some one has bought, that you have made a sale

Every sale you make, I care not whether you are selling watches, real estate, diamonds, groceries or what not, you must lead the mind of the customer through a certain series of steps or stages. If you fail in this you fail in making a sale.

There are a large number of these steps, but they are all founded upon about four primary stages First of all you get the attention of a customer second, you must lead him from the stage of attention to the place where he becomes interested in your goods; third, you must arouse within him a desire, and fourth, cause him to resolve to have the thing. Fail on one point and you have lost the sale.

Now, I say that the mind always passes through these same steps or stages—sometimes the change from one to the other is as rapid as the thought of the human mind, other times the process is extended out over a period of weeks, months and even years, as is the case in the insurance business.

It is an interesting study to watch the development from one of these stages to the next, but the thing you as business men are interested in more than anything else is to see these things applied to actual business transactions—the things that come more closely to you.

I will repeat the statement that there are three principal factors entering into every sale—the salesman the customer, the goods.

No man is properly qualified to engage in business who has not first of all asked himself, honestly and candidly, "Am I fit for this thing?" Many and mony a poor man has gone down in defeat in the great battle of business simply because he has not stopped and asked himself whether he was personally fit to handle the thing he was undertaking. I once heard an old whitehaired judge say to a class of ggraduates in an eastern law school; "Young men, as you go out in the world to practice in your chosen profession, first of all learn how you look in the eyes of the people in your community," and I would repeat that same admonition to the man who would learn to become a great salesman or a successful business man—learn how you look to the people upon you must depend for your business.

In other words, learn what your personality is like—go down the street and watch yourself—see how you appeal to people. The world of business today wants strong, winning magnetic men—and I am going to take a little time to show you how the ordinary man can make himself more winning, more magnetic, more attractive. We sometimes get the idea we have to reply upon old Dame Nature for all our personality—the fact is we have had to develop most of it

You can learn the things that appeal to people, the things that cause them to follow you, and develop your own personality, just as easily as you can develop the mucles of your arm. You can make your individual personality felt in your business, on the street; you can make people feel the personality of your store, of your town. You can learn to appeal to people through the magnetism of your bearing, through your countenance, through your memory, the use of your eye, your voice, etc., and it should be the first great step in making a sale

Again, I should say that the salesman must know something about human nature—about the things that cause people to act. He must be able to "size up" people, to read the faces, to know something of the life of the people he meets.

If you were to call an expert in to inventory your business you would find that the most valuable asset in your business, if you are a real successful merchant, is not in the goods, you have or the building in which you transact your business—it is your ability to size up people.

If you do not know how to appeal to the people of your community you cannot prepare an advertisement that will bring them into your place of business. If you do not know how to appeal to people you can not touch the emotions, their prejudices, their likes and dislikes in a manner to make them respond as you would have them respond when you are trying to make a sale.

I know that we are apt to think of this subject being a deep and mysterious thing, something that we cannot comprehend, something fit only for the consideration of the wise professor. But the human nature that I am going to talk to you about is a very simple thing. It is the nature of the people right about you—the common every-day people we are all acquainted with.

Now, there are twenty or more things that I would like to discuss about the people that I know you are meeting every day, their peculiar actions and the things that make people act as they do, and how we can learn these things, but I am merely going to repeat that it is absolutely necessary for the salesman to know these things in leading the human mind through the various steps and stages in making a sale.

But the most casual observer has noticed that you cannot drive people—you can lead them—you cannot argue a man into a thing, but you can lead him to change his opinion, his politics and his religion.

Another noticeable characteristic of human nature is the fact that people are all more or less lazy—people will follow the channel offering the least resistance—then if you would control people, if you would make a sale, make it easy for people to patronize you—do not attempt to make them do the work—reach out.

People are universally proud and selfish—never a man but is proud of something—touch that streak and he will respond—he will follow your suggestion.

But I would impress upon the mind of every salesman the fact that no two people are alike—men are so many yale locks, each must have a particular key to unlock his nature—you cannot make a sale by learning a little song by note and repeating it to all kinds and classes of people without thought of their individuality.

The great criminal attorney has learned that he must know the nature of people before he can hope to be able to win and persuade and lead a jury. He must know men and women, he must know the things that enter into the lives of people and make them what they are.

The great evangelist must know people—he must be able to look into the faces of the people before him and see the things away back in their lives—he must know where to look for the tender spots, and then he must know how to strike that spot with the most telling effect.

Then I say to you as a salesman, as a business man, you, must know people—you must know their strong and their weak points—you must know how to touch them to get the right response to your actions, your words and your suggestions.

Then I would not feel like leaving this phase of the sugject of making a sale if I did not say that every normal man and woman you meet is subject to the mighty force that we call "Suggestion," and I am going to take a little time to show you how people will respond to that mighty force that is back of the power of the hypnotist, though I would not have you gather from this remark that I want to talk to you about hypnotizing your customers—far from it—but I do want to show you how you can and must employ the same identical principles, in writing and advertisement, in leading the person, in making a sale, as the professional demonstrator uses when he causes a subject to become rigid before an audience.

You can cause people to look for the things you wish them to see in your goods to proper suggestion, and on the other hand you may often cause people to look for the very things you would rather they would not see, if you are not careful, if you do not know how to distinguish between the negative and the positive in your suggestions.

Not only can you induce people to look for the thing, but you can make them see about the thing you want them to see, too

If the shoe dealer tells people he is right there to make good every deficiency they find in the shoes he sells, the people will be looking for holes to come in the shoes; if he tells them the shoes will wear well, it will be a neat, comfortable shoe, these are the positive things they will be looking for.

The great concerns that do a great deal of advertising have learned this thing long ago—they make people look for the strong positive things in their goods, and the illustrations that I am able to offer you are for the mere purpose of showing the workings of a great principle—a thing that you can apply to the jewelry business—to the grocery business—to the hardware business or to the pleading of a case before a jury.

Then if you would make a sale—really be able to make the sale— I would say to you first of all, know yourself—know how to develop a strong, winning and magnetic personality—learn how to make people feel your magnetism.

Learn how to "size up people," learn to appeal to the nature of the people about you. Learn what it is that causes people to act, to do the things they do—then clarn how to touch these things.

Then learn how to analyze your proposition, your goods, in a manner to appeal to the reason, in a manner to touch the emotional nature, in a way to touch the prejudices of people.

By Herbert Quick

Theodore had already made the first stroke of the "T" when Craighead rushed upon him like a whirlwind, snatched the pen, hurled it into the door like a javelin, where it stood quivering, and interposed between Carson and O'Grady.

"Caitiff, avaunt!" he roared. "Wilt deprive the widows and orphans this youth may accumulate of their cause of action against this dope shotten emporium? Back, slave! You reach him only over my dead body! Receipts in full? Not on your life—to coin an expression. You have shot his patrician blood full of dishwater and bug juice. You have filled his innocent and unworldly stomach with dope. You have amputated his appetite for light wines and may as well pass him the darker drink first as last. He has suffered and must ever suffer most excruciating pain and agony and both mental and physical anguish. He's a gone gosling! And I, the greatest personal injury specialist in the legal world, as his attorney demand ten—thousand—plunks as damages, failing the receipt of which, well and truly to be paid in lawful money of the realm, we'll take the emporium in execution and make Witherspoon a stable boy, with you as assistant swipe, both of you to sleep with Tige. We don't sign nothin', see?"

CHAPTER VII.

A TALK WITH MR. WADDY.

THEODORE resolved that he must hie to the shed in the gulf dunes, complete the flying machine and bring it to the notice of the world in spite of the enmity of Mr Shayne, upon which he now confidently counted. He must—

"I know," broke in Mr. Craighead, gazing at the ceiling through wreaths of smoke, "the yearnings of your subtropical Alabamian system. But be practical. You come to this emporium, of which, alas, neither of us is fated to be an alumnus, and you find me in fine fettle save that I am unrelated to the world, I am an Antaeus, with no immediate prospects of getting my tootsies to mother earth; a storage battery as big as Pike's peak, but insulated from the mass of demagnetized humanity; a great force for a number of things, with no way of proving it. What do you do? You make a profession for me I was naught, not to mention naughty. What am I now? A great personal injury lawyer, developing into a prosperous ambulance chaser. I was out of touch with the world of finance I have now laid the foundation for the organization of the great Carson-Craighead Aeronef corporation!"

"What do you mean?" ejaculated Carson.

"What I say! What I say! Through a long, colonnaded, peristyled vista of marble and onyx I can see nailed to the back fence the hide of Mr. Finley Shayne.

"But I have no clothes," Carson urged.

"Clothes!" scornfully repeated Craighead. "What are they? Mercly woven fabrics to fill bags to secure credit withal at hotels. And you need no credit, for this room is mine for the whole term of the treatments paid for by some one into whose company I dropped or rose during my last shore leave from the good ship Lithia, but by whom I have no idea. Clothes, indeed! Scat!"

"But it's cold here," persisted Carson, feeling helpless in the toils of this serpentine logic. "I'm not prepared for this climate."

"Look abroad!" commanded Craighead, with a gesture toward the window. "The sun beats down upon the last remnants of the snow, and the little brooks give the glad ha-ha to the river and send down the silky billet doux of the catkin to remind him that they've busted loose and are hurling themselves into his arms. Why, darn you, it's spring! And you can stay right here—steam heat, bath, hot and cold water, padded cell in connection—oh, fair youth, I love thee! Let me finish bunkoing Mr. O'Grady and start the Aeronef company. Don't be a clam!"

"You know how I feel about those damages, but if I could get the capital for the aeronef"—

"Why, you don't doubt my practical genius, do you," queried Craighead in astonishment—"in other people's affairs, I mean, of course? Why, sir, if in view of my failure with my own I can't handle other people's business then what becomes of my ability? I tell you, haughty southron, I'm good for something! I have found a billionaire, and you shall meet him."

All that day Carson watched Craighead. From a trunk covered with the labels of foreign travel Craighead took a sheet of cardboard and painted upon it an elaborate sign which bore the legend, "Craighead, Attorney and Counselor at Law." This he fastened outside the door, chuckling from time to time as the passersby paused as if to read it. After awhile he added to it, "Personal Injury Cases a Specialty."

Craighead went out late and brought back several legal looking books, which he ranged upon the dresser in dusty formidability—an old set of Illinois statutes and a tattered Broom's "Legal Maxims," from which he read unctuously such Latin aphorisms as "De minimis non curat lex," "Falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus," and the like, and lectured upon them very informatively. The remainder of the library consisted of a ten years' file of Martindale's Legal Directory, containing nothing more authoritative than lists of the world's lawyers.

"Where did you get them?" asked Theodore.

"Secondhand man," replied Craighead, "on approval. We must keep up appearances even if we have to buy 'em."

They went out for a walk to give O'Grady a chance, as Craighead expressed it, to see what he was up against, a statement that mystified Theodore greatly.

On their return Mr. O'Grady seemed to have been wrought upon by what he was "up against," for he asked Mr. Craighead if he would be so good as to give him a few minutes. Mr. Craighead looked at his watch, pleaded lack of time and asked Theodore if their business could wait. When Carson admitted that it could O'Grady said "Thank you, sir," in the tone of a porter accepting a tip.

What under heaven had suddenly raised the expelled Craighead from his despised position in the institute to a thing to inspire terror and panic Theodore could not imagine nor guess the reason for Craighead's sardonic laughter as he sat in their room drawing indictments against O'Grady and Witherspoon. He saw, however, that these were awesome documents, which set forth in a large, round hand that these gentlemen had been guilty of obtaining money under false pretenses, false imprisonment, malicious assault and the like, all done "feloniously, of malice prepense and aforethought, not having the fear of God before their eyes, but instigated thereunto by the devil," and "against the peace and dignity of the state of Illinois and contrary to the statutes in such cases made and provided."

"Theodore, when we return," said Craighead, "this room will be full of corpses knocked stiff by these impeachments of O'Grady and Witherspoon. Take the spoor of the billionaire. Hike—oh, hike—with me!" They crossed a dim field, followed a farm road and came back into the village from the opposite side. Craighead hurried Carson to a broad porch under tall elms and maples knobby with swelling buds. He pushed a button, and they waited.

At slow steps in the hall Craighead squeezed Carson's arm spasmodically. The door opened, and a low figure stood before them in which Theodore noted something familiar, and a voice not altogether strange, he thought, invited them into the "other room."

"Mr. Carson," said Mr. Craighead, "does not recognize in our host the erstwhile guide of my wandering and wabbly feet. Mr. Carson, in your new and fully established capacity as a respectable citizen let me present you to Mr. Waddy, to whose counsel, precept and example while acting as my attendant I feel myself indebted for my complete restoration to Philistinehood. Mr. Carson, Mr. Waddy!"

Mr. Waddy, ignoring this reintroduction, led them silently down the hall, past a door, which gave forth scuffling sounds, female voices and the peeping of young chickens, and took them into a snug den, the shelves of which were covered with books—tall, imposing, learned looking tomes in time darkened bindings—where they sat down in leather covered chairs gray with dust.

"So you did reely drop into the garden?" their host finally asked.

"Yes," answered Carson. "I think it was foolish to take the risk, but I did."

"Why?" queried Waddy, and Carson explained.

"Boy foolishness," said Mr. Waddy, and silence fell again, broken at last by Theodore's inquiry as to whether Mr. Waddy was active in eight banks and if he did not find his duties irksome.

"No," replied Waddy. "The things growed up on me. I never wanted to be a banker, but my rents kep' loadin' me up with deposits, an' I sort of got one bank after another—darn it!—country banks—the boys run 'em. I came here to have a quiet time in my own way, an' see how I make out. They wanted me to put on style They reckoned I was going to when I bought this place I could slick up an' go to stockholders' meetin's an' the boys never knowed. An' jest as I got things right Caroline's nian dies, an' here she comes to 'take care' of me! I shan't be allowed to earn a cent by workin' for Witherspoon, an' it brought me into such society. Them jags is mighty nice fellers, some of 'em."

"I thank you," said Craighead, with an excess of manner "And as for your being condemned by family pride to sterile uselessness, it is truly a shame. But is Caroline a relative?"

"Only daughter," answered Mr. Waddy. "Come to live with me. Settin' things to rights."

"Mr. Waddy," said Craighead, "bear up under this. It may be for the best. And let us take up Mr. Carson's great project for monopolizing aviation. I have long believed that some one would turn up with the machine to subordinate all others, but since the time of Santos-Dumont, Farman and the Wrights aerial navigation has made no real progress. Mr. Carson is the genius We offer you the unique chance to be with us comaster of the world. Mr. Carson will be glad to explain his aeronef."

"I won't put a cent in it!" said Mr. Waddy.

Carson's heart sank.

"Certainly not," replied Craighead, as if Mr Waddy's refusal were the most natural thing in the world, "until you have ciphered the thing down to brass nails. And then— But tell Mr. Waddy about it, Mr. Carson. You need not enter into the offers of millions we have had and spurned. Just describe the machine."

Carson switched on the lights, and they gathered about the table.

CHAPTER VIII.

MR. WADDY INVESTS.

THE young man talked slowly. Once in awhile Mr. Waddy interjected a question which evinced intelligent comprehension of the heart of Carson's explanation. Carson explained that his aeronef differed from all others in having wings like a bird's, which did not flap, like those of the absurd orthopters and yet used half their surface in beating the air with a straight thrust like that of an oar in water.

"Don't yeh use screws?" asked Waddy.

"Not at all," answered Carson "The screw can never be effective, because it strikes with a slant. It will do in water, but air requires a more effective thrust. When your propeller blade moves at a hundred miles an hour, say, you have a lift of thirty pounds to the square foot of surface with the direct stroke. But the surface of the screw"—

"Now, how d'ye figger that?"

Carson repeated laboriously.

"Why," said Carson, "I can lift weights that none of the other airships can stir and fly off like an eagle with a fish!"

The farmer-banker and the inventor were so absorbed that they scarcely noticed the entrance of a messenger from the institute with a message from Mr. O'Grady asking if Mr. Craighead would step outside for a moment nor Craighead's withdrawal and return.

"The direction of the blow of the propeller," said Carson, "is under perfect control. A bird's wing isn't. This is a better wing than an eagle's."

"Kin you raise right straight up," asked Waddy, "without running along like a buzzard?"

"I sure can," replied Carson, falling into dialect. "No bird can do that—no big bird. It's a better, stronger flier than any bird. The best any other machine can do is to support four pounds to the square foot of surface. With my new motors I can fly off with five times that, and I've got four times their bearing surface. I can carry mail and express at a profit or passengers that can afford it. I can hover over a ship with good heavy torpedoes and sink her and overtake any vessel that floats. I can"—

"What kind of motors you got?" interrupted Waddy.

Carson went into details. The old man looked through his eyebrows, whiskers and mustaches at Carson and the drawings.

"What if your engines stop," he asked, "when you're a mile high and over water mebbe?"

"I can soar," answered Carson. "I can make headway and gain height with no power if there's a wind, and I can stay up for hours with the propellers set for aeroplanes But the best thing I haven't mentioned—the gyroscopic balancing device."

"What's that?" asked Mr. Waddy.

"Why, it's the successful application of the gyroscope to aviation."

"They used to talk about that," observed Mr. Waddy, "long ago—the Brennan single rail roads. I thought it turned out that the gyroscopes was too heavy f'r air work."

"They are too heavy," cried Theodore, "if you use them to do the balancing. That's sure. And so we have had to balance by feeling, just as we do a bicycle. Thought isn't quick enough, so you have to rely on feeling, as a bird does. But I use little gyroscopes not to control by their weight and stress, but to distribute power to the wings and rudders—positive, automatic distribution of power. Why, if the engineer of my machine should fall dead it would fly on just as he set it until the fuel was exhausted. It feels and thinks."

They did not notice the opening of the door nor see the woman who entered.

"Papa," she said.

Mr. Waddy rose hastily and faced her. She looked like Mr. Waddy, but was undeniably pretty. He was blocky and short; she, round and plump, with small hands and feet. The turned up pug nose of Mr. Waddy was modified to a delightful little retrousse effect in her.

"Papa," said she, "this is hardly a place in which to entertain these gentlemen. We have cleared out the east parlor."

"Oh, yes!" assented Mr. Waddy, with feverish haste. "To be sure, Caroline! Take 'em in, won't you? I've got to see the hired man. My daughter, Mrs. Graybill, Mr. Craighead; Caroline, a—a friend of mine, Mr. Carson of Alabama. Excuse me for a minute, gentlemen."

"Supper," said she, smiling, "will be served very soon."

The long dining room was gloomy with decayed gentility—black beams, dark wainscoting and a broad plate rail bearing wrenches, clevises, oil cans and baskets of eggs labeled as to breeds and dates. During the meal Craighead came out amazingly in his encounters with Mrs. Graybill, to whom, as it seemed to Theodore, he was making violent love. Mr. Waddy sat buried in thought, save when he questioned Carson concerning the aeronef.

"There's no cinch in it," said Mr. Waddy, "no monopoly, an' as soon as it's public everybody'll build 'em. I do business on cinches."

"Oh, but the patents, Mr. Waddy!" cried Craighead. "You forget the patents."

"They expire in a few years," said Mr. Waddy, "an' then where are yeh? Land, now—that I made my money in—land's an eternal cinch."

"Mr. Waddy," said Craighead, "this matter of securing exclusive control of the air is a part of our plans. It is one of my specialties."

Carson was amazed. Mr. Waddy grunted as if lightly impressed, as no doubt he was.

MANY ARE INJURED IN CAR RIOTS

[Associated Dailies Telegram]

Columbus, O., Aug. 12.—Prospects for an early settlement of the local streetcar strike are not bright, and the municipal authorities are confronted with a condition which threatens to become serious unless checked within the next few days. During the past 24 hours more than 40 riot calls have been received at police headquarters, and while many of the reported disturbances proved to be of minor importance, many shots were fired from ambush at passing cars operated by nonunion crews. Conductor J. R. Anderson was shot through the leg at Sullivant and Glenwood avenues, and A. Anderson, a motorman, received a bad gash in the head and had his hand mashed by flying stones. Motorman A R. Anam, running on the same line, was rendered unconscious when a stone collided with his head. Motorman Brown and Conductor Kidwell were also laid out by missiles thrown from the thick vegetation which lines the track in the extreme western portion of the city.

Explosives were placed on the tracks over the Fourth street viaduct and the crew and passengers were pelted with stones, many whose names were not learned being injured

Nonunion crews continued their practice of firing revolvers promiscuously, but no one was hit and no arrests were made, the police arriving long after the disturbances had ceased.

Detective Injured.

Three city detectives on a South Side car drew their revolvers when an auto containing four men drew up alongside and began stoning the car. The detectives fired at the occupants of the machine but none of their bullets found a mark. As the auto driver suddenly shot around a corner one of his companions emptied the chamber of his revolver at the detectives. Detective Hamer received a painful injury on the arm from a stone, but the officers escaped the bullets

Enforced arbitration was the demand made at the mass meeting held in Memorial hall, which was almost filled. The speakers were John J. Lentz, F. S. Monnett, M. E. Thrailkill, James M. Henderson, Fred Fay and George W Bope. They asked all union sympathizers to refrain from acts of violence and to continue to walk as the most effective means of bringing the company to terms

The chamber of commerce directors, who have been working to bring about arbitration despite the attitude of the Columbus Railway and Light company against such a settlement, decided they would make no further efforts along this line until order is completely restored. At a meeting of city officials a majority sentiment favored forcing arbitration upon the disputants.

An effort will undoubtedly be made to have a special session of the grand jury called to investigate the rioting if it is not suppressed within the next few days. A large number of alleged rioters have been bound over to await the action on the part of the grand jury, and it is believed that a few indictments for car stoning and other offenses would have a salutary effect on the lawless element of the city.

Admits Attempt at Murder.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 12.—Mrs. Helen Barnhart made a complete confession, declaring she had tried to kill Miss Beulah Mountz by sending poisoned candy through the mail, because she thought Miss Mountz had stolen her husband's love

Roosevelt Studies Farm Life.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 12.—Theodore Roosevelt is inspecting Long Island farms and farming conditions and gathering material for the farm uplift movement which he started while in the White House.

Warming Cold Dishes.

Castle Kilkenny is one of the oldest inhabited dwellings in the world, some of the rooms being 800 years old Among its ancient treasures is a service of gold plate. Besides the ordinary plate service, Castle Kilkenny has the whole series of gold cups used at coronation banquets down to the time of George IV. The gold of the service plates is almost without alloy, consequently very soft and easily marred; hence the plates are warmed and presumably also washed after use by being dipped into hot water, held by a pair of tongs whose tips have been muffled in chamois leather.—London Mail.

A Freak of Nature.

Colonel Dennison had become the happy father of twins, and his unbounded pride in this twofold blessedness found expression on every occasion

He stood with a friend on the bank steps one day as a young woman passed wheeling a baby carriage containing a pretty girl baby.

"Haven't you children been queer," said the friend lightly, "with only one child?"—Success Magazine.

SENATOR BRISTOW

His Charges Denied by Rhode Island Colleague.

ALDRICH ON DEFENSIVE

[Associated Dailies Telegram]

Washington, Aug. 12.—Senator Nelson W. Aldrich, enumerating the counts under which he was indicted by Senator Joseph W. Bristow of Kansas in recent campaign speeches dealing with the tariff on rubber, in a letter made public denies the charges in their entirety. Incidentally he pays his respects in caustic language to Senator Bristow and what he terms a little group of men who entertain opinions similar to those of the Kansan. The letter was addressed to Representative McKinley of Illinois.

Drew Fat Salary

[Associated Dailies Telegram]

McAlester, Okla, Aug. 12.—The congressional committee investigating Senator Gore's charge of attempted bribery concluded its work here and left for Sulphur, Okla.

Ormsby McHarg of New York told of his employment as eastern attorney for the Choctaws at a salary of $12,000 a year and expenses Congressman Carter questioned him in an effort to show that all he had done for the Indians was to make one speech before a committee. The chairman stopped the controversy. Meiling said the secretary of the interior had asked him to draw a bill that would blaze the way for a speedy settlement of tribal affairs He said that much of his time had been occupied in trying to straighten out the embarrassments the legislative acts of Carter had caused Much interest had been taken locally in the investigation and it is the consensus of opinion that most everything has been given in evidence except that going to show that Senator Gore was offered a bribe at the instigation of McMurray.

Noted Woman Lawyer Dies.

Washington, Aug. 12.—Mrs J. Ellen Foster, widely known for her ability in law, politics and philanthropy, died at a local hospital as the result of an operation which was thought to be necessary to prolong her life. She had been ill for several months. She was active in national W. C. T. U. work and was an attorney for the organization. She was one of the few women admitted to practice before the United States supreme court.

Woman Floater Found.

Catlettsburg, Ky., Aug. 12.—Bound with 30 feet of rope, the body of a pretty and well-dressed woman was found here in the Ohio river. There were no marks of identity, the only clew being the shoes, which bore the label of a store in Huntington, W. Va. It is believed the woman was murdered.

Want Rates Increased

[Associated Dailies Telegram]

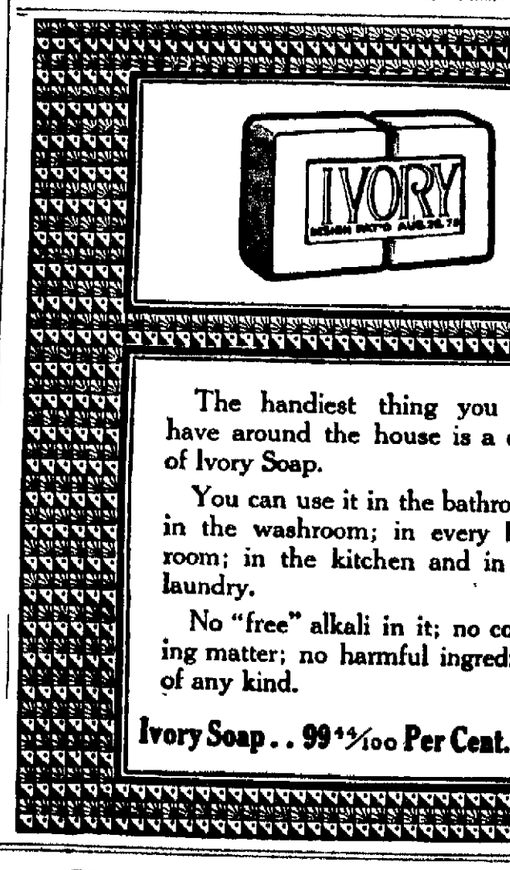

Topeka, Kan., Aug. 12.—Hundreds of employes, representing all lines of the Chicago, Rock Island and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, in secret session in Topeka, adopted resolutions which are to be signed by employes of all roads west of Chicago, asking President Taft, the interstate commerce commission and all national and state lawmaking bodies that freight rates on every railway in the United States be increased or that the lines be permitted to raise them. The claim is put forth that the employes, their wives, their children—in fact their entire future depends on the increase in freight rates.

A Fashion Chat on Evening Dresses.

Furnished by Pictorial Review 853 Broadway, New York City.

Evening gowns are strikingly picturesque on account of their simplicity of design and the beauty of material employed in them. The effect of one handsome gown seen at a notable affair was flowerlike. The skirt fell in about the feet in lines like the petals of a flower and its artistic drapery added still further to the suggestion.

Tunics are worn a great deal and they range from the pointed overskirt to the very soft drapery that is caught together below the knees with a cabochon ornament or beaded tassel.

Many evening gowns are entirely without fulness on the hips, but generally there is a tunic or a drapery of some filmsy material falling below the knees which adds grace and prevents a too plain, lanky figure.

Of course, the train is always worn for evening but Parisians have adopted the short dress and for dancing it is surely more suitable. This is a question, however, that can only be settled by the individual to suit her own requirements.

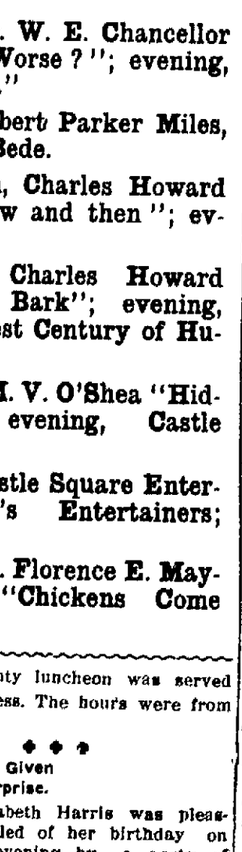

Sleeves are short draped affairs in length being about half-way between the shoulder and elbow. The corsage bouquet of artificial orchids, violets and gardenias and a moderate use of rosebuds on the evening frock have quite a vogue.

Veiled effects in evening gowns are charming and mysterious. Beautiful silks and satins form the foundation of the gown while materials so sheer and diaphanous that you imagine a breath would blow them into nothingness, form the draperies and overskirts. Tulle and chiffon studded with tiny pearls and crystals are exquisite and in the light of the ballroom the effect is superb.

PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERN No. 3454 was originally made of pink and white French tulle. The circular skirt is separate, and has an inverted plait at the center-back. The over-skirt drapery is in corsage-girdle effect in front, while the back is gathered low on the skirt to form a knot. Pattern sizes are for 32, 34, 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure and the medium size requires 8¼ yards of 48-inch material.

Pretty Function Marks Friday Society Events.

This week is replete with society events, notwithstanding the fact that it is mid-summer and the weather extremely warm. One of the very prettiest events of the week's end attraction was an afternoon party Friday at "Walnut Hills," the beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Renfrew on the Keene road. This affair complimented Miss Rose March of Pittsburg, Pa. the house guest of Miss Guida Renfrew. An extremely large number of the younger set enjoyed this occasion which was the most delightful function given this season. During the afternoon a dainty luncheon was served by the hostess. The hours were from 3 to 5.

Fads and Fashions

FADS AND FANCIES

Flowers have lost prestiges in millinery; fashionable trimmings are plumes and aigrettes of Paradise in black and white

Black is popular for evening wear, and jet trimmings are seen everywhere, in buckles, garniture or all over forms

The metalled Egytian scarfs are again in fashion; they are even more thickly covered with hammered metal than formerly

Pekin stripe is a blue and white silk of China or foulard weave showing a perfectly even arrangement of blue and white

The fad for wooden beads has become a craze; in black and in colors they are thick as locusts in the plagues of Egypt

SECTION HAND RUN OVER AT TRINWAY

Angelo Dong, 21, an Italian employed as section hand by the Pennsylvania Co. at Trinway, was run over by a westbound freight train in the Trinway yards Friday afternoon about 1 o'clock. His right foot was crushed just above the ankle and will have to be amputated. He had stepped out of the way of No. 6 and into the way of the freight.

He was brought to Coshocton on No 6 and taken to Wolfe's undertaking rooms. Dr. Pomerene attended him. He displayed iron nerve and did not complain.

The Hookah in India.

The hookah is smoked as a refreshment and sign of fellowship by the natives of India and not merely as a luxury. When a group of natives are seated together and, as is the custom, the hookah is passed around to each in turn, it is considered very bad manners for any one to decline to have a few puffs. If the hookah is thus refused in a friend's house or while one is the guest of another it is regarded as an insult. If for any reason a native is put out of caste the fact is strictly marked by his former caste fellow's refusal to smoke with him, and any one who eats, drinks or smokes with an outcast is himself outcasted.—Chambers' Journal.

WORTH MOUNTAINS OF GOLD

During Change of Life, says Mrs. Chas. Barclay

Graniteville, Vt. — "I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter." — Mrs. Chas. Barclay, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

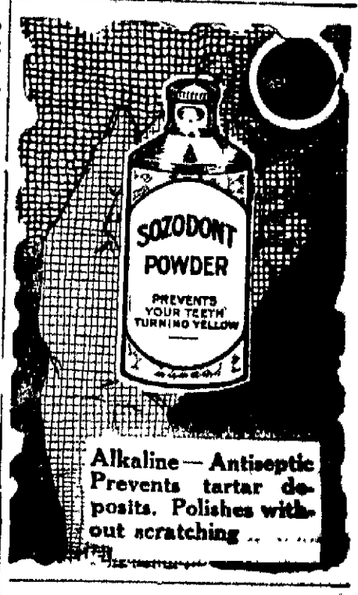

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

LEG MASHED BY A HORSE

Frank Lowe, residing two miles north of Bloomfield, was knocked down and his left leg was badly trampled by a horse which he was leading across a stream Friday morning. Dr. Harmer attended him. No bones were broke.

ON ROAD TO RAPID RECOVERY

[Associated Dailies Telegram]

New York, Aug. 12.—At St. Mary's hospital in Hoboken the following bulletin was given to the public: "Mayor Gaynor is resting comfortably. He has taken sufficient nourishment. He is cheerful and much stronger. Completed radiographic examination made by Dr. E. A. Caldwell shows definitely that the bullet is lodged in the vault of the pharynx. It is easily accessible, but it is not considered wise to attempt its removal at the present. Blood examination is also satisfactory."

Two of the specialists whose names had hitherto appeared on important bulletins were not present at this conference and their names did not appear on the statement handed out to the reporters.

What the physicians call in their bulletin a "completed radiographic examination" is really a new examination altogether, which was forced by the fact that from the X-ray plates taken on Tuesday the physicians in attendance upon the mayor were not able to locate the bullet within a half inch of exactness in the "lateral plane."

There was a well founded report current that a division of opinion among the six experts in attendance upon the mayor had arisen out of the fact of this indefiniteness in the location of the bullet. Some were in favor of an immediate operation to extract the bullet, with this imperfect photograph as a guide; others insisted that it would not be wise to make the attempt with the unfinished radiograph.

RATS ARE HIS SOLE COMPANIONS

[Associated Dailies Telegram]

New York, Aug. 12.—According to employes of the Sixth division of the appraisers' stores, where James J. Gallagher once worked, rats were almost the sole companions of the man who shot Mayor Gaynor. By the power of a peculiar noise he made in his throat, rodents flocked to Gallagher in much the same manner that they did to the Pied Piper of Hamlin.

Rats swarm into the big warehouses from ships arriving from all quarters of the globe and at times become so numerous and fierce that the other workmen run away from them. But not Gallagher. He stuck and began to make a peculiar noise, one that his fellow workmen could not imitate, and therefore could not describe. At once the rats went to him. As he continued they climbed up his legs and sat on his shoulder. His fellow workmen, looking in upon him, saw the rats gather about him with squeals of affection that sounded similar to the noise that Gallagher made. They crept upon him from all sides. He stroked the rodents as he continued to chuckle and they climbed all over him. Gallagher gave no heed to their size or appearance. He coddled them and let them nestle in his arms. He finally put the rats away from him, but to horrify the other men he called them back every noon hour with the same cry. They came through cracks in the floor and holes in the wall. "They are lovable animals," he often told his companions. "The rat is much misunderstood. You must greet him with his own love call and he will not harm you."

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

AN EASY AND HARMLESS WAY TO DARKEN THE HAIR.

Who does not know of the value of sage and sulphur for keeping the hair dark, soft, glossy and in good condition? As a matter of fact, sulphur is a natural element of hair, and a deficiency of it in the hair is held by many scalp specialists to be connected with loss of color and vitality of the hair. Unquestionably, there is no better remedy for hair and scalp troubles, especially premature grayness, than sage and sulphur, if properly prepared. The Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Cortlandt St., New York City, put up an ideal preparation of this kind, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur. It is sold by all leading druggists for 50c. and $1.00 a bottle, or is sent direct by the manufacturers upon receipt of price.

TEMPLARS PICK DENVER

[Associated Dailies Telegram]

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Eminent Sir William E. Mellish of Cincinnati was unanimously elected grand commander of the Knights Templar. Mr. Mellish is a prominent business man of Cincinnati and has been identified with the Knights Templar organization for years. He succeeds to the office of grand commander through promotion, the only contest being for the lowest office.

The committee to which was entrusted the duty of recommending the city for the next triennial conclave agreed on Denver.

The resolution, which was unanimously adopted, establishing a concordat between Knights Templars governing bodies, is said by Masons to be the most important step taken by the conclave for many years. The concordat establishes amicable relations between the knights in England, Ireland, Scotland, Canada and the United States, and is an event which has been crystallizing for many years.

SPORT

Sheridan Who Will Not Compete For All Around Title.

Martin J. Sheridan, the best general athlete in the country, has declared he will not take part in the all around championship event of the A. A. U. to be held in Chicago. Sheridan says his duties as a New York policeman are going to keep him busy, but his friends declare that he is "miffed" over some of the actions of A. A. U. officials. The fact that Sheridan will not take part leaves the contest open, and as a result a much larger field than usual will take part.

Players Go Back Quickly.

Once a ball player gets on the downward path he travels fast. The career of Tim Flood well illustrates this philosophy. Tim came forward three years ago with lots of noise, and when he was appointed manager of the Saints the next year he had reached the pinnacle of his baseball fame, for to be manager of the A. A. is a more important position than that of an ordinary warrior in the majors. Tim's managerial career was bitterly disappointing, and he not only lost that job, but also his second base position with the Saints. Last spring he was sent to Little Rock and was then transferred to Chattanooga when the franchise was purchased. Now comes the information that Chattanooga does not want him and that he will play this year with the Waterbury club of the Connecticut league. That'll just about wind Tim up.

England Has Rival of Weston.

England has a famous pedestrian who is somewhat of a rival to Edward Weston. He is the octogenarian walker Mark All. His latest effort is to walk 5,000 miles in ninety days. All originally started out in 1900 to walk 100,000 miles in ten years. He finished his task on July 31, 1909. In the September following he was once more on the move, for he intended to keep walking for ten years, and he set himself to cover 10,000 miles in 200 days. He actually did the distance in 196 days, completing the last mile on April 4, 1910.

When he finishes his latest 5,000 miles he will have tramped 115,000 miles since Aug. 6, 1900.

This Is Sculling de Luxe.

Alexander McCulloch, the English sculler who contested for the Henley Diamond sculls, is one of the wealthiest scullers in the rowing game, being a landlord of a big estate in England.

He motors to his rowing quarters in the morning and has two men look after his work. His trainer sculls with him, each being in a single shell, and when they are through McCulloch walks out of his shell and leaves it there for his boatman to clean, polish and put away. He takes his auto, collects rents, has luncheon and, after a ride about the country, goes for another row on the river to get an appetite for dinner.

Mattern's Deceptive Fling.

Bob Bescher says that one of the hardest pitchers for him to get any kind of a lead on is Al Mattern. He has a snap throw that has caught men napping one foot off first. It is the closest thing to a balk without actually being a balk ever seen. Left handers have the advantage over right handers in holding a runner on first, and the right handers can keep a runner pretty close to third.

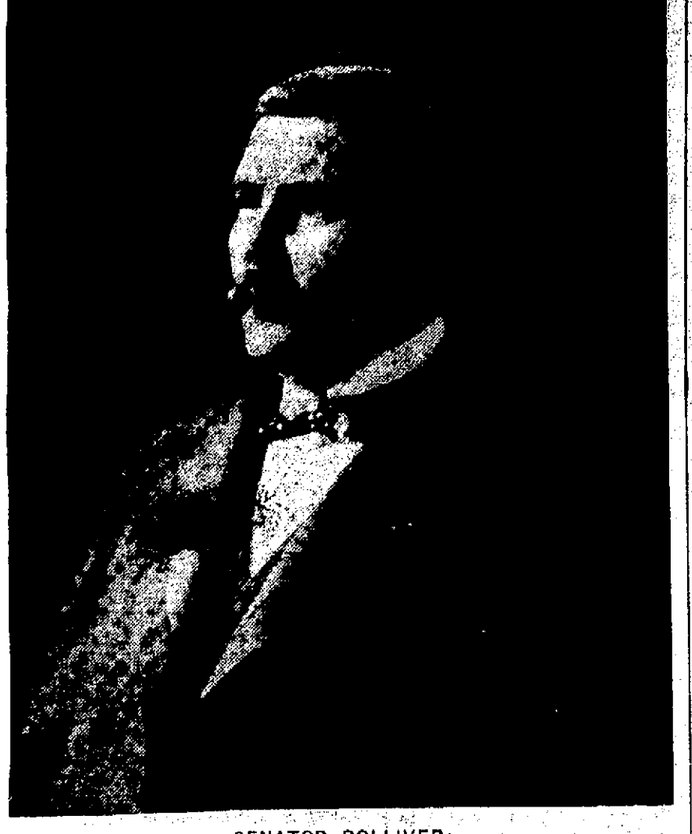

Umps Are Careless.

Big league umpires are lax about calling balks. "Without reflecting upon the ability of the chief umps," comments a critic, "it can be stated without danger of contradiction that the officials have been somewhat lax in strictly enforcing the rules, and time after time runners have been nipped off bases at critical times, materially changing the ultimate outcome of the games."

MAGAZINES PAID TO BOOST JUDSON HARMON

Columbus, Aug. 12.

A man is accounted blameless who harbors an ambition to become president of the United States. He is exercising good judgment in promoting his own interests in case he thinks he has a chance.

Governor Harmon can't be criticised for establishing personal press bureaus in Cincinnati, Washington and New York. As a man of considerable private fortune, inordinately ambitious, having had a taste of Washington official and social life while serving as Grover Cleveland's legal advisor, nothing could be more natural than that Governor Harmon should adopt modern methods in his pursuit of the presidency.

But one feature connected with Governor Harmon's multiple publicity department which is interesting to those Ohio Republicans whom the governor hopes to have help him back into the governorshipthis year is the fact that Harmon's press bureaus, the three of them, are considerable more than personal in character. They are distinctly corporate, quite the essence of all that stands for Morgan and monopoly.

At the present time no less than a score of high-salaried, capable and, in most instances, well known magazine and newspaper writers are engaged in exploiting the candidacy of Governor Judson Harmon for the presidency. Every one of the articles you see in practically every weekly and monthly magazine you pick up, deals with the Buckeye executive from the standpoint of his presidential qualifications, but each article is predicted upon his "triumpham reelection as governor of Ohio this year."

Such esteemed newspapers as the New York Sun including an unenviable group of about half a dozen, all of them considered powerful organs and in nearly every instance presumably Republican papers, are as busily engaged in advancing the interests of Judson Harmon as is each of the members of his own private official family. Every well informed man knows that J. Pierpont Morgan is the owner of the New York Sun. Quite a number of other such papers are known to be notoriously owned, managed and controlled by predatory interests. A majority of these have been generally recognized as Republican papers, some of them have certainly never advocated any but Republican doctrine, provided, of course, it happened to be the sort of doctrine especially desired at that immediate time.

The public is reasonably familiar with the fact that Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan personally went to the assistance of "the House of Harper" when that great institution was in dire straits several years ago. Hence the excuse for not only one but several laudatory articles on Judson Harmon which have appeared in the Harper publications. And this notwithstanding the well known fact that the distinguished editor of Harper's Weekly has long been insistent in his entreaties that President Woodlow Wilson, of Princeton, be nominated by the Democrates for president.

A careful search discloses that not one of the weekly and mouthly periodicals which are known to have been aided by the Wall street money interests through the medium of alleged popular stock issues during the past ten years has failed to "deliver" at least TWO articles on Harmon during the past 15 months or since Harmon definitely determined to accept the nomination forgovernor in May, 1908. Since which date the great machinery of a very persistent monopolistic system has slowly but surely established indeterminate means of foisting Harmon upon the people as the reincarnation of the unmentionable Cleveland himself.

To the layman who has little knowledge and less patience with generally and generously disliked and harness the hoi paloi are most interesting.

From Maine to California, from the unassuming little bureau maintained in San Antonio, Texas, to another just as quaint but not so quiet up in St. Paul, Minnesota, there is determination in the ranks of the gentlemen who are promoting publicity for the candidate of the interests in 1912 And hundreds of bushels of this adroitly arranged matter is being mailed and expressed into Ohio. The alleged availability of Harmon for the presidency in 1912 is being used as argument in favor of reelecting him governor of Ohio this year.

And the word adroit is expressive. Harmon's paid pencilors are not claiming the earth for him in hostile or unfriendly territory. In sections where President Woodlow Wilson is presumed to have a following, the Harmon publicity bureaus accord President Wilson even more credit than his staunchest friends have ever claimed for him. But alongside Wilson's portrait invariably appears an excellent likeness of Governor Harmon, who is said to be the unanimous second choice in that section. In Georgia, where Hoke Smith still has a following, the same tactics are pursued. Last Winter and Spring before death laid low the incomparable John W. Daniel, he was unknown to him or his most intimate friends, extolled for his matchless oratory, his fearless leadership of the Democracy on the floor of both branches of congress through three decades, as well as for the memory of Daniel as a dashing commander in the Confederacy. But there was in these adroitly prepared articles the invariable undercurrent of favorable mention of Judson Harmon, everybody's second choice everywhere.

In March, April and May the Democratic newspapers in scores of cities and towns in New York state carried feature stories commendatory of Mayor Gaynor for the presidential nomination. But the picture of Governor Harmon of Ohio was just as

The sentiment for Joseph W. Folk is known to be prevalent. Down in Texas, emanating principally from the bureau established out in San Antonio, the tide turned to Joseph W. Baily, the Lone Star senator who has been discredited but not discounted or distruant. Alongside the feeling references to his availability appeared the unmistakable praise of Harmon, the ever present.

Trade and class journals have not been overlooked. Interspersing such argument against the Payne tariff act as is desired by the interests who object to lowering of schedules, the ramifications of the series of publicity bureaus that are working assiduously for Harmon and Morgan are indeed far-reaching. For instance, there is now being sent out an article accredited to the Ladies' Home Journal which undertakes to show that every article of feminine apparel has been raised to a prohibitive price on account of the new tariff law. The catch line, "Men Must Not Read This" served to attract considerable more attention from the male members of the family. This array of false figured is attributed to one "Marion E. Leland," who probably is playing upon the reputation of Margaret E. Leland, a writer of wide popularity. "Republicans are Responsible," is the keynote of the yarn, a dismally untruthful one. The idea is clever, but it was not carried out.

Hodcarriers were once mightily championed by Judson Harmon, according to publications which appeal particularly to hodcarriers. Several times "Uncle Jud" has hustled to the aid of mailcarriers, longshoremen, bankers and stool pigeon fanciers; if one should be convinced by the arguments in "Uncle Jud's" press bureau matter, the equal of which has never yet been produced in America since publicity became a recognized affliction of mankind.

SOUTHERN GRAIN AT THE BIG EXPOSITION

Agriculturists Alive to Its Great Opportunities.

Cincinnati, O.— (Special.)— Southern agriculturists are alive to the opportunities which the Ohio Valley Exposition, to be held in this city from August 29 to September 14, is holding out to them. From all sections of Dixieland come reports of county fairs and other industrial projects at which are shown the products of various sections of the different states, and in every instance there is a decided desire on the part of the management of these enterprises to secure specimens of grains and other agricultural products to be submitted to the Committee on Southern Resources of the Ohio Valley Exposition, having in charge the assembling of exhibits for the big Southern display. Only a few days ago there were exhibited at the Statewide Immigration Convention at Jackson, Miss., some extraordinary samples of wheat and other grains grown in Covington county, Miss., and other sections of the state now devoted largely to the cultivation of grain. These samples came in the shape of threshed grain and also in the way of grain in the sheaf, giving an idea of the general growth of agricultural products. Immediately after the convention these samples were submitted to the Southern Resources Committee, which will have hundreds of these specimens from which to select the classiest samples for the Ohio Valley Exposition.

Yazoo county, Miss., is another section of that state which has been sending extraordinary example of grain crops to the various state conventions.

Meanwhile, Ohio Valley farmers are slow to see the advantages of exhibiting their crops at the Exposition, a fact which will give additional prominence to the Southern exhibit.

Earl V. M. Long, the Harvard university athlete, who just completed a four year course at that institution during which he has lived on $1 a week, attained the highest success in scholarship, athletics and general activities, and has traveled the world over during his summer vacations. "Bo" Long as he is known to his classmates declares that he originally lived on $1 a week because he had to do so or quit college. He found it possible to do this within inconvenience after the habit was formed and has kept it up. He works for his pasage in summer.

She Didn't Mind.

"Sarah, I really wish you would be more careful; I do not like to hear your mistress scolding you so often," said the master of the house to the parlor maid.

"Oh, don't mind me, sir," replied Sarah, simply, "I take no notice."

LABOR DAY PIANO IS ON DISPLAY AT CHAUTAUQUA

The Compton-Price piano which will be given away by the Central Trades and Labor Council on Labor Day, will be on display in the big auditorium at the fair grounds during Chautauqua, and will be used there during that time. It is an excellent place for displaying the beautiful instrument for not only will the handsome case be displayed but the splendid tone will be given a thorough test. It will be used in all the musical numbers.

The volunteer firemen are working hard to possess the instrument and they say that "There is nothing to it," that they have it won already. Of course others who are anxious to win say that they will have to be shown and there promises to be a lively contest.

GOV. HARMON ACCEPTS INVITATION TO ATTEND BLOOMFIELD PICNIC SEPT. 9

Gov. Judson Harmon has promised to attend the annual Bloomfield fair and picnic to be held at Duncan's grove, Friday, Sept. 9, providing the date is acceptable to the fair association.

James Graham was in Columbus Wednesday and extended a personal invitation to the governor, who accepted stating that Sept 9 would suit him best. The plans for the picnic will therefore probably be made in accordance with the governor's wish.

A meeting of the fair association will be held at the Clark schoolhouse Saturday evening to elect officers and make other arrangements. D. C. Lawrence has been acting as temporary chairman of the organization. Two years ago Governor Andrew L Harris attended the picnic and made an address. No picnic was held last year.

Harrold Hildebrandt while swimming in the Tuscarawas river north of the city Thursday afternoon, found a gold band ring belonging to W T Knight which was lost by Mr Knight's son, Arthur, about two months ago

The ring was an heirloom, it having belonged to Mr Knight s mother. Mr Knight gave it to his son to wear about two months ago The afternoon the boy was given the ring, he went to the river and swam. The ring dropped from his finger to the bottom of the stream and although he looked for it for hours, with the help of other boys there, it could not be found and was given up for lost.

Thursday afternoon, young Hildebrandt went to the river and was wading across when he saw something shining on the bottom of the stream. He dove and came up with the ring in his hand. Hildebrandt lives near the Knight boy and knew to whom the ring belonged. It was restored to the owner.

Mr. Knight is now wearing the ring for safe keeping

Free Sample For Baby's Ills

Something can and must be done for the puny, crying baby, for the child that refuses to eat and is restless in its sleep. And since the basis of all health is the proper working of the digestive organs, look first to the condition of the stomach and bowels.

A child should have two full and free movements of the bowels a day. This emptying of the bowels is very important, as with it comes a clear head, a lightness of step, good appetite and sound sleep. But it is equally important to know what to give the child in the emergency of constipation and indigestion. Cathartics are too strong and salts and other purgatives are not only too strong, but the child refuses them because of their bad taste. Have you ever tried Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin? It is a liquid tonic that families have been using for a quarter of a century. It is mild, pleasant-tasting and promptly effective. It is good for you as well as the child, but there is nothing better to be found for children. They like its taste—you will not have to force them to take it.

First of all, if you have not yet used it, Dr. Caldwell would like to send you a sample bottle free of charge. In this way you can try it before buying. Later, when convinced of its merits, you can get it of your druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, just as thousands of other families are doing. The family of Mr. D W Spangler of Strattonville, Pa., as well as that of Mr. A. F. Johnson of Walnut Grove, Tenn., started with it in that way and now write that it is their one family necessity next to food itself. If you are unfortunate enough to have a sickly child, one given to constipation and indigestion, you should send for a free sample of this remedy.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, B.510 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

S.S.S. FOR SUMMER SKIN DISEASES

Smooth, healthy skins are a rarity in Summer. Most persons are annoyed with pimples, boils, rashes or eruptions, while others suffer more severely with Eczema, Acne, Tetter, Salt Rheum, or some kindred skin disease. All skin affections come from humors and acids in the circulation. The blood, as it circulates through the system, deposits these acids and humors in the sensitive membranous flesh which lies just beneath the outer skin or tissue covering the body. This acrid matter causes inflammation and a discharge which breaks through the delicate cuticle, and skin diseases are the result. To cure any skin trouble the blood must be freed from all acids and humors, and for this purpose nothing equals S. S. S. This great blood purifier goes down into the circulation and completely removes every particle of impurity, enriches the blood and in this way permanently cures skin diseases. S. S. S. cures, because it purifies the blood and allows it to nourish, soothe, and soften the skin instead of irritating it with fiery acids and humors. Book on Skin Diseases and any medical advice free.
